All DMA General Meetings are free and open to the public — bring a friend!

ACRONIS is perhaps best known for its “True Image” software, the fastest and most reliable method for backing up files on your computer. If you’re like most, you have much of your and your family’s life stored on that trusty (?) old local hard drive. If it fails, irreplaceable financial, tax, legal, and personal records (tax and legal documents, photographs, etc.) are gone forever.

Gene Barlow is one of a vanishing breed: a manufacturer’s rep who still works closely with user groups throughout this country. He presents a “webinar” each year to DMA, outlining Acronis’ latest products. (Yes, the company makes more than back-up software!) Gene has also contributed valuable technical articles to THE DATABUS.

This year’s edition of True Image supports Windows 8, and hard drives greater than 2 terabytes in size. Gene will answer your questions and offer Acronis products at substantial discounts. Software purchased from Gene also comes with technical support not given by the manufacturer.

Join us in welcoming Gene Barlow at 7:00 P.M., Tuesday the 29th, at 4801 Springfield Street. This month, we return to our usual meeting room on the third floor.

DMA Board of Trustees — Meeting of August 6, 2012

Minutes are normally published about two months late, because Minutes of the previous month must be approved by the Trustees at their meeting the next month. ## OLD BUSINESS

Publicity Committee — Jim ULLOM

Jim has a friend with some public relations experience, and will ask what he might charge work for us.

DMA Picnic — Martin ARBAGI

Holiday Dinner — Glady CAMPION

We have a room reserved at the Spaghetti Warehouse for Tuesday, December 11.

Dallas Museum of Art — Jim DALLEY

Jim received a letter July 31. The Dallas Museum of Art bought several domain names we could adopt as our new domain name.

Myron Schlensker expressed his reluctance at selling the “dma.org” domain name. He offered several alternative suggestions to selling. He reminded the Board that we have held this name for many years and should not give it away easily.

Jim Ullom moved that we offer to sell the domain name “dma.org” to the Dallas Museum of Art for $50,000. Gary Turner seconded and the motion passed.

PyOhio — Glady CAMPION

PyOhio was held on July 28 and 29 at the Ohio Union at Ohio State in Columbus. Organizers were expecting about 200 attendees.

APCUG/CAMUG Regional Conference — Jim ULLOM

Jim Ullom and Glady Campion attended the APCUG Regional Conference in Canton on July 12 and 13. There was a long list of speakers and plenty of door prizes. Bob Vance, our region 3 advisor, asked if DMA would hold the 2013 regional conference in Dayton. Jim Ullom is talking with the Englewood Holiday Inn. We would try to use as many local speakers as possible.

NEW BUSINESS

DMA Annual Meeting in September

10% Discount to DMA members!

In the absence of DMA President JIM DALLEY, Vice President GARY TURNER chairs a packed meeting.

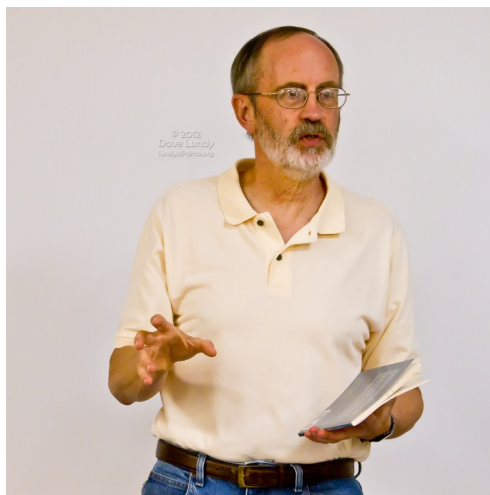

BILL IRVINE, our speaker, drives a point home.

Looking very Roman, RUFUS WALKER (above) listens to Prof. Irvine discussing his ancestor [?].

GLADY CAM-PION (right), considers publishing that novel she's just finished.

Little could MUSONIUS RUFUS have known that he'd sell out audiences almost 2,000 years after his death! The ancient Roman philosopher's fragments (nothing written by him has survived intact, so we only have bits and pieces) were translated by retired Wright State University Classicist CYNTHIA KING. WSU Professor of Philosophy WILLIAM IRVINE contributed an Introduction. When no major publisher expressed any interest, Bill decided to self-publish, using Amazon's "Create Space" Web site. The book has since sold about 1,000 copies. Bill discussed his experiences with and insights into the self-publishing industry at our August meeting, drawing a full house, with a substantial number of non-members in attendance. Official DMA photographer DAVE LUNDY snapped the candid shots above.

Should The Dayton Microcomputer Association Remain
The Dayton Microcomputer Association?
—An Exchange of Views—

AT THE LAST MEETING, the selling of the dma.org domain was discussed. The question “what should we call ourselves now” was also put out there, and we were invited to spend some time thinking about this.

While thinking it over, I realized two things:

1) The term “microcomputer” is very dated — popular in the 70s, and pretty much out of usage by the 1990s.

... AND ...

2) Perhaps the new name should somehow more broadly encompass various digital hobbies or advancements, such as the ongoing shift to tablets and smartphones, instead of desktop computers.

Even the terms “PC” or “computer” might be a bit too limiting to truly encompass the shift that is moving from desktop to tablets and smartphones. “Computer” is, of course, technically still correct, but perhaps we should call ourselves the “Dayton Computer Users,” or maybe something like “Dayton Digital Enthusiasts.”

Thanks,

Daniel Woodard

DAN WOODARD’S PROPOSAL IS NOT NEW. When I was DMA Treasurer for the first time, we still had an office at 119 Valley Street to house the Ohio Technology Access Project (OTAP), and Mike Carr was OTAP’s Director. 119 Valley was on my way to work (I was partially retired at that period and only went in part-time), and I’d stop by the DMA office, generally arriving between 7:45 and 8:15 A.M., and put in a couple of hours’ effort on DMA finances before going on my way to my “real” office at Wright State University. Mike C. came in about the same time, and we had several conversations on this subject.

Mike was emphatic on the need for a name change, and used all the arguments that Dan Woodard puts forth. Well, maybe he didn’t speak of tablets, which were in the developmental stage at that time (2007–2009). Mike was convincing. However, in the last three years, I’ve given a lot more thought to the matter, and am no longer sure.

If you look around, you’ll see that “retro” is the order of the day when it comes to branding and packaging. Just this morning (Wednesday, 6 September) I was reading an article about kitchen appliances over coffee in The Wall Street Journal. It seems that stainless steel is fading as “the” look for refrigerators, stoves, etc. What’s replacing it? Well, Whirlpool, a leading U.S. manufacturer familiar to all of us has come up with a brilliant idea: White! (Whirlpool calls it “ice.”) A sidebar to the WSJ article notes

(perhaps with a touch of sarcasm) that white for kitchen appliances first became standard in the 1920s.

There are literally dozens of other examples I could cite. For example, the big mail-order hunting, fishing, and camping outfitter in Maine, L. L. Bean, now celebrating its 100th anniversary, has returned to a typeface used in its catalogs back in the 1930s. (Admittedly, this is temporary.) A third example is the Coca-Cola company, which went back to its legendary Victorian “hourglass” bottles and jugs several years ago. And of course Coke never did abandon its equally Victorian calligraphic trademark.

I think we ought carefully to consider changing our name. Perhaps those of us who know people who work in the advertising industry, might consult them and take their advice into consideration. I can think of a publicity slogan right off the bat: “DMA — it’s more than computers!”

A final thought: if we do change our name, we should also decide whether DMA is primarily a professional group, a hobbyists’ group, or a little of both. “Dayton Digital Enthusiasts” is most appropriate for a hobbyists’ club.

Martin Arbagi

I WASN’T AWARE that DMA was considering changing its actual name (as opposed to its Internet domain name).

However, my thoughts about the URL have been running parallel to Daniel’s. I think that de-emphasizing the term “microcomputer” might not be a bad idea.

I’m thinking that “daytoncomputing.org” would stake some significant territory and indicate the breadth of our interests. It’s also meaningful and easy to remember.

Thoughts?
